Nature is bustling with spring energy--and so is our office!

Parents with parenting agreements are looking ahead to the summer--working out schedules, adjusting their parenting agreements, and making decisions about which activities the kids will participate in this summer, and when they will be on vacation. Mediation is an efficient and effective way of working through these decisions--before they become issues and threaten summer fun!

If you haven't looked ahead on the calendar from Memorial Day to Labor Day, chances are there will be a glitch or conflict somewhere. For example, did you know the Fourth of July will be on a Tuesday? Is it your holiday? Your vacation? Take a few minutes and check the calendar for the months of May, June, July and August and anticipate where a scheduling dispute might arise -- be it your vacation plans, or your child's summer camp. When does school start in August? Solving the potential disputes now may mean a fun filled summer rather than days where you are negotiating otherwise avoidable changes to plans.

If you have resolved it, you are a success story! If you need help, schedule a consultation or mediation session with us so you can reduce the stress and possible conflict that can happen when summer visitation schedules are unplanned.
