

Happy Thanksgiving!

Ready for the holidays? This year Christmas Eve is Friday and Christmas Day is Saturday. Just click on the following link to get your printable *Holiday Conflict Resolution Tips* sheet. And in keeping with the holiday, before things get to hectic, we want to take a moment to say "Thank You"!

We are so grateful for the families who used our services to resolve conflicts this year. We settled matters about how to peaceably co-exist in lock down, the yes and no's of vaccines, in person and virtual schooling and parenting time. We also facilitated discussion and resolution about end-of-life matters, final wishes, family members in nursing homes with limited and sometimes no access to loved ones, and funeral planning of funerals that could be attended or had to be put off to a future date.

Families trusted us when they were most fragile and at risk. Sometimes those risks were further compromised by depression, mental illness, lack of good coping or conflict resolution skills.
